Gift giving is not an obligation

Gift-giving should not be an obligation. Furthermore, not receiving a gift from someone should not condemn that person to your blacklist.

A gift is simply a gift – something you give to someone because you thought they would like it. You thought of them when you saw or made this gift and knew they had to have it.

If you buy the mail carrier a scarf because you thought to keep his ears warm, this doesn't mean you must give one to the trashman. Of course, if the trashman's ears are equally as important to you as the mail carrier's, you may find yourself knitting mufflers for both of them.

If Mary has been a real peach helping you adjust to a new job and Roy merely made it clear that he wanted your job, you are not obligated to gift them both just because their cubicles abut.

It would be lovely to be able to give a gift to everyone regardless of your feelings about them, because that's what Jesus, "our Reason for the Season," did. However, we will always make excuses for our limited gift giving; a lack of money or time or the thought that even Jesus would probably give Roy a lump of coal.

To be perfectly frank, we are not Jesus. We are not perfect. We were not born with that kind of capacity for love and forgiveness. We do not always think of other people. Our hearts are fickle.

However, regardless of how much money or time we have, or how much perfection we lack, everyone we know is deserving of our regard; a gift of ourselves.

I know people who put limitations on their giftgiving. That person is over 18 year s old, so... no gift. That person didn't give me a gift last year, so... no gift. That person isn't really part of the family, so... no gift.

A persons place in life should not determine whether or not you give them a gift. Money should not play a part either, but it often does.

To give a gift, one must either buy one with dollars or make one with time. If you don't have time, you probably have enough money. If you don't have money, you probably have enough time. Time is the one resource that people sometimes forget they have. Consider making something for the people in your life; even if it is a beautifully hand-written note. I love to receive handmade gifts!

Gift giving is not an obligation. It is an expression of love or friendship. It should not be a chore. If it is, you are doing it wrong. It should be something you want to do.

If spending money causes you stress, then make something or do something for the people you know and even for those you don't know. You've heard it said many times: "It's not the gift, but the thought that counts."

If you have a beautiful voice, sing for them. If you have a talent for cooking, make lasagna for them. If you have a green thumb, grow something for them.

If you are good with a hammer, build something for them.

As always, a gift is optional. If, for one reason or another, you did not receive a gift from someone this year, don't be offended. If they forgot about you, it simply Give of yourself to those people who hold your regard. Don't let money, time, or obligation make it a chore. This is something that should be easy to do. Most importantly, it is something that should not be reserved merely for the Holiday Season.
