The Bookworm ... For Kids

'Gargoyle Hall' Houses Chills

"Gargoyle Hall: An Araminta Spookie Adventure" by Angie Sage; © 2015, Bloomsbury Children's Books; 216 pages

BY TERRI SCHLICHENMEYER

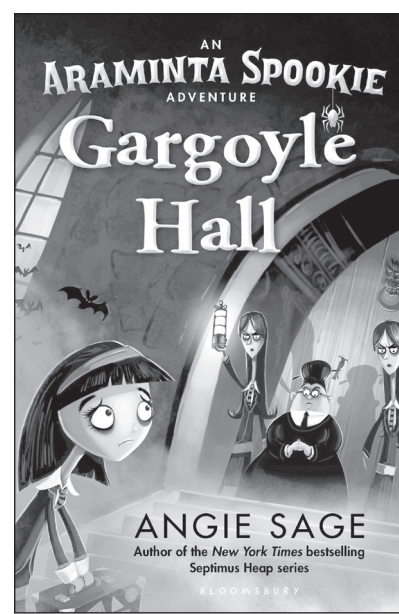

"Use your head!" That's what your parents, grandparents, even your teacher says all the time. Use your head. Think things through. Don't stop looking for the solution because you're close to an understanding — even if, as in the new book "Gargoyle Hall: An Araminta Spookie Adventure" by Angie Sage, you have to go somewhere else to find it.

Like any good detective, Araminta Spookie loved a mystery. She and her sidekick-best-friend, Wanda Wizzard, were really talented at solving them, and that was a great thing, because Spookie House was positively filled with mysteries!

First of all, Araminta's Uncle Drac wasn't sleeping with his bats, which was a mystery. And then he told the girls that they couldn't go into the Bat Turret, which was another mystery. And then there was the mystery of why Aunt Tabby and Great-Aunt Emilene were planning on sending Araminta away to boarding school.

That was the saddest mystery of all because Araminta didn't want to go. Sure, she'd been the cause of a little trouble... but was it really that bad?

Great-Aunt Emilene must've thought so, because it wasn't long before Araminta was on the steps of Miss Gargoyle's Academy for Girls, right in front of Miss Gargoyle herself! As round as she was tall, Miss Gargoyle was waiting for Araminta, accompanied by two skinny, identical girls who both looked like vultures. Araminta was not happy, but what else could she do except try to figure out the mystery of why she was there? Uncle Drac hinted that it wasn't her fault. Sir Horace the Ghost said he would come quick, if she needed him. Even Wanda, who'd quietly stowed away in Araminta's trunk (along with one of Uncle Drac's little baby bats), was at the Academy for support but things just weren't adding up.

Who were the Vulture Girls, and why were they so weird? Was it safe to trust the blocky woman called Matron? Why was Miss Gargoyle locked in her room at night? And the biggest mystery of all: What was The Beast that howled all night in the hallways?

Like any good detective, Araminta had to know!

It took me awhile to figure out a lot of things in this book. I couldn't quite get a bead on the characters, how they related to one another or even why. Eventually, it hit me that, though there's nothing on the front cover or inside flap to indicate as much, "Gargoyle Hall" is the latest in a series.

That's important to know because author Angie Sage's gently spooky tale is cute, but it'll be much better if readers have the full story. Once they do, 8-to-11-year-olds who are prone to nightmares but still crave a few mysterious chills should be able to handle Araminta Spookie quite easily.

My advice would be to start your child at the beginning with a couple of the earlier books, to get the gist of the story before tackling this one. If you don't, readers of "Gargoyle Hall" might be in over their heads.

Yankton Orchestra Festival Nov. 10

Setting the tempo and shaping the sound of 200 orchestra students will be the primary goal of guest conductor, Chad Hutchinson, at the 14th annual Yankton College & Yankton High School Orchestra Festival to be held Tuesday, Nov. 10 in Yankton.

The ensemble of high school students from South Dakota and Nebraska will play together at the day-long event and end with an evening repertoire at 7 p.m. in the Yankton High School Theater that is open to the public and free of charge.

Yankton High School Orchestra Director Kim (Hillestad) Evander, a 1976 Yankton College graduate who majored in music and education, and who organizes the festival, says, "This is an exceptional educational experience for regional string players. The students learn how to perform in a very large group, they make friends with students from other schools who share the same interests and they get a unique perspective about the music they have learned from a guest clinician."

Chad Hutchinson is the newly appointed assistant conductor of the South Dakota Symphony and Music Director of the South Dakota Symphony Youth Orchestra. This season he will conduct the South Dakota Symphony in Pops, Run-out and Family concerts as well as conducting four youth symphonies within the Youth Orchestra program.

Adhering to its educational mission, Yankton College has financially supported the Orchestra Festival since its beginning in 2001. For further information, contact Yankton College at (605) 665-3661.

Yankton Library Will Be Closed Nov. 11

USD Addiction Studies Grad Student Earns $20,000 Minority Fellowship

VERMILLION — University of South Dakota graduate student Jaime Anderson, a member of the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, has been named one of 13 fellows of the Minority Fellowship Program for Addiction Counselors in the Association for Addiction Professionals (NAADAC).

Anderson, from Chamberlain, has been working as a substance abuse counselor with Native Americans for seven years. She graduated from USD in 2013 with a bachelor's degree in behavioral science and is finishing a master's degree in addiction studies. She works for Indian Health Service on the Crow Creek Indian Reservation in South Dakota.

As a NMFP-AC fellow, Anderson will receive NAADAC training, education, professional guidance and a tuition stipend of up to $20,000 for the current school year. After graduation she hopes to become a licensed addiction professional with IHS on the Crow Creek reservation.

NAADAC said this inaugural program is in response to President Barack Obama's 2013 plan to reduce health disparities and improve behavioral health care for racially and diverse people in the U.S.
