

Firefighters Gloves

A Firefighters Gloves hold many things
 From elderly arms to a kids broken swing.
 From the hands they shake and the backs they pat
 To the tiny claw marks of another treed cat.
 At 2 am they are filled with chrome
 From the DWI who was on her way home.
 And the equipment they use to roll back the dash
 From the family of 6 she involved in the crash.

The brush rakes in spring, wear the palms out
 When the wind does a "90" to fill them with doubt.
 The thumb of the glove wipes the sweat from the brow
 Of the face of a firefighter who mutters "What now?"

They hold inch and three quarters flowing one twenty five
 So the ones going in, come back out alive.
 When the regulator goes; then there isn't too much,
 But the bypass valve the eagerly clutch.

The rescue equipment, the ropes, the C-collars,
 The lives they saved never measured in dollars.
 Are the obvious things firefighters gloves hold,
 Or, so that is what I've been always told.

But there are other things Firefighters Gloves touch,
 Those are the things we all need so much.
 They hold back the rage on that 3 am call
 They hold in the fear when you're lost in a hall
 They hold back the pity, agony, sorrow
 They hold in the desire to "Do it tomorrow"

A gloves just a glove till it's on firefighters
 Who work all day long just to pull an all-nighter
 And into the fray they charge without fear
 At the sound of a "Help" they think that they hear

When firefighter's hands go into the glove
 It's a firefighter who always fills it with love
 Sometimes the sorrow is too much to bear
 And it seeps the glove and burns deep "in there"

Off come the gloves when the call is done
 And into the pocket until the next call.
 The hands become lonely and cold for a bit
 And shake just thinking of it.

And they sit there so red eyed with their gloves in their coats
 The tears come so fast that the furniture floats.
 They're not so brave now; their hands they can't hide
 I guess it just means they are human inside.

And though some are paid are others are not,
 The gloves feel the same when it's cold or it's hot.
 To someone you're helping to just get along,
 When you fill them with love, you always feel strong.

And so when I go on my final big ride
 I hope to have my gloves by my side
 To show to St. Peter at the heavenly gate
 Cause as everyone knows, firefighters don't wait.
