HUNT

From Page x

Besides hunting, Eric also likes to promote archery hunting. He says that when given the opportunity, he will tell kids that if they ever want to go to the Olympics they should pick up a bow and start shooting.

"We have the facilities and the training right here."

Eric says it's great to have the National Field Archery headquarters here because it offers so much to this region.

"If I was an 8 year old kid living in Yankton, I'd be out there everyday shooting."

There is no such thing as no hunting season in the Moore house, Chris said. There is always something going on and "he studies about it. He is non-stop about hunting. It's in his blood," says Chris.

He has also been recognized by Boone & Crocket and Pope and Young for many of his kills.

"He's got quite a few records in the books, which is just like gravy to him," adds Chris.

As of the time of this story, Eric will be returning from a caribou hunt in Quebec.

Eric probably sums it up best on his Facebook page, "The culture I stand for is sometimes lost into today's society, when in fact society was built on the culture of THE HUNTER. A hunter is more than a predator, a hunter is a provider...a caretaker...a leader. I will never make excuses for who I am."

DOES EVERYTHING YOU THINK IT WILL. AND THEN SOME.
