The Bookworm ... For Kids

'Storm' Is A Wild Sequel

"The Storm" by Virginia Bergin; © 2015, Sourcebooks Fire; 336 pages

BY TERRI SCHLICHENMEYER

Science is an interesting thing. It can tell you how the sky is blue and your cat isn't; why you kinda resemble your great-grandpa, if you squint; and when's the best time to go moon-watching. Fascinating stuff, right? But what if, as in the new novel "The Storm" by Virginia Bergin, you were the science experiment?

The Rain had killed everybody that Ruby Morris knew.

Or did it? She couldn't be sure if the mutant germs inside the water had only taken her friends, her mother, step-father, and baby-brat brother, or if it had killed her father, too. After all, the Rain was deadly, but not completely: a few people, including that nerd, Darius Spratt, were smart enough not to get wet.

But Darius was gone now, as was the food and water Ruby had left — and her hair, which she'd shaved off because she couldn't wash it anyhow. Her baldness enhanced the bruises and broken nose she'd gotten from a car wreck that happened while she was looking for ... well, for anything. Home, mostly.

But on her way there, she found something unexpected: her old frenemy, Saskia, who'd stolen almost every boy Ruby ever liked. Ruby wasn't exactly happy to see Saskia.

Except that Saskia accidentally got her foot wet, someone hacked it off to save her life, and Ruby couldn't just let her bleed to death so she took Saskia to the Army camp, though Ruby sensed that doing so was dangerous. She'd been there before, had seen the fence and the guards with guns, and she knew it wasn't a good place. But they had medicine, so it was a good place for Saskia.

And there at the Army camp — there was Darius Spratt! He was alive, had found a job "crunching numbers" for the Army, and he assured Ruby that she'd be OK — but once again, the nerd didn't know what he was talking about.

Nobody was safe in the Army camp — especially Ruby, and especially after the army learned something surprising about her. She had to escape, but secrets would definitely go with her.

The Army wasn't about to let that happen ...

So did you read last years' "H2O" by author Virginia Bergin? If not, stop right here and read it first. If you don't, very little in "The Storm" will make sense.

If you're ready for this sequel, though, here's what to expect: a screaming ride filled with loops and turns that make your stomach do flip-flops and your heart pound. You can look forward to turning pages so fast they practically rip as Ruby learns her strengths — in more ways than one. You can expect to be practically tied to this book and when it's over, you can expect to want more.

But will you get more? Hard to say, but there is a nice tease at the end of this book, one that'll keep teen-and-up readers hanging from a pretty high cliff. And if that's what you like in a book, then reading "The Storm" isn't rocket science.

'Pioneer Girl' Wins Midwest Booksellers Choice Award

PIERRE — After spending six weeks on the New York Times Best Sellers list in 2015, Laura Ingalls Wilder's "Pioneer Girl: The Annotated Autobiography" has been chosen by the members of the Midwest Independent Booksellers Association (MIBA) as a Midwest Booksellers Choice Award recipient for nonfiction.

The South Dakota State Historical Society published Wilder's account of her family's pioneering experience last November. Edited by Pamela Smith Hill, the book continues to be popular with readers across the country.

Members of the MIBA represent a majority of booksellers in the Midwestern region. They annually nominate and vote for their favorite books published each year. To qualify, the book must be pertinent to the region or the author must reside in or have roots in the area. There are five award categories:

fiction, nonfiction, poetry, children's picture books and young adult/middle grade.

"To have the booksellers of our region select 'Pioneer Girl: The Annotated Autobiography' for this award is an honor," says Nancy Tystad Koupal, director of the South Dakota Historical Society Press. "The experience of working with the real-life story of Wilder was thrilling, and we share in the excitement of these book-store owners over the book's success."

Koupal will represent the South Dakota Historical Society Press at the Heartland Fall Forum awards banquet sponsored by the MIBA on Oct. 9 in Chicago Heights, Illinois. Attendees will receive a special "Pioneer Girl: The Annotated Autobiography" broadside and have a chance to discuss the publishing of Wilder's "Pioneer Girl" with Press representatives.

In Wilder's autobiography, written before the "Little House novels," she describes 16 years of the Ingalls family's westward journey from Kansas, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, back to Minnesota, and on to Dakota Territory. The book is a result of extensive research and study over four years by the Pioneer Girl Project. The goal of the Press was to present Wilder's original work, supplementing it with additional information through annotations, maps and photographs. It is the first publication to explore fully the pioneer life of the Ingalls family and the people they met along the way. Currently there are more than 150,000 copies in print, and another printing is in progress.

"Pioneer Girl: The Annotated Autobiography" is available for $39.95, plus shipping and tax. Visit www.pioneerproject.org or call (605) 773-6009. More information about the Midwest Booksellers Choice Awards can be found at www.midwestbooksellers.org.
